

INDEX

Zeus, god of Tarsus assimilated to, 119, 143 ; Ciliciau deity assimilated to, 144 sqq., 148, 152; the flower of, 186, 187 ; identified with Attis, 282 ; castrates his father Cronus, 283 ; the father of dew, ii. 137; the Saviour of the City, at Magnesia on the Maeander, 238 - - si Corycian, priests of, i. 145, 155 ; temple of, 155 - - - and Hecate at Stratonicea in Caria, i. 270 ?/., 227 - - - Labrandeus, the Carian, i. 182 - - - Olbian, ruins of his temple at Olba, i. 151 ; his cave or chasm, 158 sqq. ; his priest Teucer, 159 ; a god of fertility, 159 sqq. - - - Olybrian, i. 167 w.¹ - - - Papas, i. 281 //.	Zeus and Typhon, battle of, i. 156 160 Zimmern, H., on Mylitta, i. 37 n.¹ Zimri, king of Israel, burns himself, 174 «., 176 Zion, Mount, traditionally identified with Mount Moriah, ii. 219 x.¹ Zoroastrian fire-worship in Cappadocia, i. 191 Zulu medicine-men or diviners, i. 74 75 ; their charm to fertilize fields, ii. 102 sq. Zulus, their belief in serpents as reincarnations of the dead, i. 82, 84 ; their observation of the moon, ii. 134 sg. ; the worship of the dead among the, 182 sqq. ; their sacrifice of a bull to prolong the life of the king, 222
------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

THE END